The heart's affection—secret thing!
Is the cleft rock's ceaseless spring,
Which free and independent flows
Of summer rains or winter snows

JOANNA BAILLIE

(Concluded.)

But Madame Prevot pleaded so earnestly to remain, and, indeed Mr. Dunbar coincided. Isabella was then in her sixteenth year, a lovely, interesting girl, and her guardian could hardly doubt, but that, at eighteen, when her father had appointed for her and Charles Hollister to meet and decide whether they would marry together, if there was a negative, it would come as it ought, from her.— It was therefore settled that she and her governess should remain at Hamstead till Isabella was eighteen, the ten thousand pound clause in the will making it sure to the mind of Mr. Dunbar that no pains would be spared, on the part of Madame, to keep her young charge from any and all dangerous acquaintance. There was only one difficulty to be overcome. Madame Prevot was very anxious to visit her friends in Cuba for a month or two, Mr Dunbar was not willing that Isabella should take the voyage; it was finally settled that the young lady should pass the time of this visit in a clergyman's family, the Rev. Mr. Lowens, in Northumberland, where she could pursue the solid branches of study to great advantage. Mr. Dunbar himself accompanied Isabella to Northumberland, and placed her under the care of the excellent and his wife to whom he unfolded the whole history of his ward, and felt that he might fully confide in the faithfulness. Alas how few people can be trusted when a strong pecuniary temptation prompts them to violate their honor and duty!

So thought Madame Prevot as she summoned Isabella's servant, the true hearted slave who though now free, had always given her young mistress with he love and devotion which only those born in and belonging to a family can be expected to feel,

'Kitty,' said Madame Prevot, in her blandest manner, for she wished to examine without alarming her, 'Kitty when your young mistress was at the house of that Mr. Lowens she was very happy, I believe.'

'O yes, missie, very happy, replied Kitty, smiling at the recollection.

'And she had some pleasant people to visit her, I suppose,' continued her questioner.

'Oh, no, ma'am, she no want any, she too happy studying her books,' replied the girl.

'But was no one there, only Mr. and Mrs. Lowens?' said Madame Prevot.

'Nobody but Mr. Hartley, the teacher,' replied the other.

Mr. Hartley! who was he pray? I never heard before, 'said Madame Prevot impatiently. 'What did he teach Isabella?'

'Oh! 'matices and the stars, 'stronomy you call it, and he was good teacher; my missies learn much of him.'

'Was he—a young—man!' inquired Madame Prevot, hesitatingly.

'Yes, young and much handsome, and so good! Why, he will be clergyman and go into pulpits some day, like Massa Lowens, I think.'

'You may go,' said Madame Prevot, 'I dare say,' she continued to herself, after Kitty withdrew, 'this Hartley was some friend or connection of the rector's, his assiduity to please, perhaps, and so they managed to make Isabella fall in love with him, in hopes to secure her fortune. 'Tis a regular conspiracy! But I will make her ashamed of such a mean-spirited man. I will go this instant and search her drawer, I dare say she has had letters from him, and I must have some evidence to show Mr. Dunbar, so that he may see I have done my duty.' It was his fault, placing Isabella there; if she had only gone to Cuba with me all would have been well.'

Isabella was walking in the garden when Madame Prevot made the search, and discovered, in the young lady's treasure-box, not a love-letter, but what was more important, the very lover himself. There was the picture, representing a young and remarkably handsome man—and, proof beyond a doubt of the affection of Isabella for the original, on a paper in which the miniature was enclosed, was written in her hand, 'Dear Hartley.'

It would not be possible, in this short sketch, to describe the consternation of the governess—and to add to her troubles, she really did not know what course to pursue. Isabella would so soon be of age that she did not like to offend her, and she actually put back the picture and went to her own room to consider. At length, thinking something must be done, she returned, to the apartment of Isabella, who, engaged in singing a plaintive song, did not hear her enter. Madame Prevot approached the toilette table opened the box, and, drawing forth the picture before Isabella perceived her, said in a slow solemn voice, 'Miss Hastings, your secret is discovered, may I ask you for the history of the miniature?'

The poor girl seemed paralyzed—her guitar slid from her helpless hand, and she sat as in a dream, without reply or motion, save that her trembling fingers were twined into the cord of her dress, as though she would seize on something for support.

Before Madame Prevot could, with the miniature in her hand, determined that he should see she had been vigilant in detecting the imposture, and that it was not her fault Isabella refused to marry Mr. Hollister. What was her surprise when, in the countenance of a young gentleman who accompanied Mr. Dunbar, she recognised the original of the miniature! Before the guardian could introduce his companion the indignant governess exclaimed. 'Mr. Hartley, do you dare to enter my doors? you, who have stolen the affections of my pupil in the most dishonorable manner, and made her disobedient to the last wishes of her father! It is well that I have discovered your secret. 'Here,' she continued, holding the miniature and the paper to Mr. Dunbar. 'here, I have just found these concealed among Isabella's treasures—and I have found out that this Mr. Hartley passed himself off as a teacher, and gave lessons to her when she was with the Lewens. She loves him, I fear, for ever since she returned she would never hear a word in favor of marrying the man her father wished, Mr. Hollister. But I am not to blame—I have done all I could—and I think I ought to have the ten thousand pounds.

'And so you shall, my dear Madame,' said Mr. Dunbar, smiling. 'My friend, Mr. Hollister, is under great obligations—allow me to introduce him—for your exertions. He may now be sure of the affections of Isabella, since two years' absence, and your eloquence would not shake her fidelity. You will be rejoiced to know that Mr. Hartley and Mr. Hollingston are the same person. I arranged the plan of the meeting of the young people, for though I wished them to marry together, I did not think it could be brought about by reasoning or education.—The heart must, or ought to, make its own election—we may arrange circumstances, make those acquainted whom we wish to have united—propinquity has great influence; but, after all, the free choice and real preference can only give a rational hope that the married life will be happy.'

A wise man practices the three following things; he abandons the world before it abandons him—he builds his sepulchre before the time of entering it, and he does all with a design to please God, before entering into his presence.

From the Camp Soldier.

THE GARRISON GHOST OR THE RIVAL SUBS.

A Sketch, by the Company's Clerk.

During the year eighteen hundred and something, there was posted at old Fort N——, a company of troops belonging to a regiment now experiencing the delights of dying according to law, and being buried according to regulations, in the pleasant summer residences and sylvan retreats of South Florida. It was officered by an old bachelor captain, whose chief delight lay in the gun and angle, and two subs, both late graduates of 'The Point,' and who, of course, could not appreciate the propriety of being condemned, by the War Bureau, to vegetate at a post better adapted to the extensive rearing of cabbages than soldiers. The only society enjoyed by them was found within themselves, and from a feeling of ennui, dashed slightly perhaps by an emotion of spite against their superiors, they devoted a major part of their time to practising, with the field sixes, upon empty barrels moored in the lake, got one of which, it may well to say, was ever in the slightest degree injured by their shot. But in due time a rather formal, though polite note reached the post from the bureau of of ordnance, intimating that even contract powder was not to be procured short of some slight disbursements, and that therefore the gentlemen had liberty to suspend further operations upon the unoffending flour casks—so that the sons of Mars were left entirely without diversion. You may well, therefore, imagine the joy to learn that an assistant surgeon, with a wife and an angelic daughter, had been ordered to the post, and that he was to arrive early in the glorious month of June!

A few evenings previous to the anticipated advent the young officers were seated beneath the porch of their quarters, and as every thing discussable beside had long since been exhausted and worn to shreds, the conversation naturally turned upon the important event about to transpire.

'Tell! De Lancy,' said the eldest, a tall, fine looking fellow, with the bronzed features of a southern clime, 'as the lovely lady must of course have one of us, and can have but one, let us, in the most amicable manner, push the siege to the utmost—and as all is fair in love and war, and anything to relieve the tedium of our mushroom existence is a godsend, let us at once become rivals—what say you?'

'I'm agreed,' said the other coolly tapping his boot with his rattan, 'for as I saw her at Washington, and flirted with her an entire evening, I think I am a little in advance of yourself, Harvey.'

'Then let my superior tact be offset against your prior attachment—and as we are both young, and, I flatter myself, good looking, we stand upon about equal ground.'

'Where are to be their quarters—' learn?' asked De Lancy.

'Yes—in the old mess house—and now, by the by, I hope the family may not be superstitious,' responded Harvey, with a sly look at his fellow sub.

'Superstitious! why what can there be in this old barrack to excite their fears?'

'Why—ble s you! the ghost!'

'You speak as though he were a particular and familiar friend of your own—pray, where does his ghostship harbour?'

Throughout the month of June he appears nightly in the old mess house—and it is related of the last detachment posted here, that their commander sought and obtained orders to remove solely on that account.'

'Thank heaven! I am not superstitious,' said De Lancy, a slight pallor, however, overspreading his face, and giving the lie to his words, 'but, egad, should he appear to me, his wanderings may be stayed—I shall as surely fire upon him.'

'As well fire upon the sprays of Niagara, for, as you must know, ghost are seldom tangible—at least none that I have ever seen were so,' said Harvey: as he strolled across the parade.

Poor De Lancy! his superstitious fears were wide awake—and though as brave a soldier as ever fought a Seminole, yet the prospect of a tete-a-tete with a ghost was no joke, and he thought with a serious countenance upon the horrors of such an encounter.

Dinner was despatched, and the two were smoking their cigars under the porch, on the day when the long awaited coming was about to be verified. Both were clad in the undress of their profession, their light frocks buttoned to the chin and presenting rather an uncomfortable contrast, with mercury at ninety in the shade, to their ease-loving captain who, with coat thrown off, and attired in dressing gown and slippers, was smoking his meerschaum and lounging out of a window near by. A wagon now came in sight which had been for some time rumbling down the road, and piled upon it was luggage that peculiar description and look possessed only by military traps. Another and another like vehicle followed, until the captain bounced from his seat, exclaiming 'Some mistake must have been made—instead of an assistant with a wife and daughter, we are going to have the entire hospital department on our hands—but as I live there is my old friend Gayland?" and the antiquated campaigner leaped throug the window to greet his acquaintance; who at the moment rode upon a fine horse to attend to the stowage of his, belongings," and the arrangement of his quarters. The young gentlemen threw away their cigars, and were introduced, while all the available force of the garrison was put in requisition to discharge the baggage trains. Soon all was arranged, that is to say, the movables were all thrown topsy-turvy into the building, in such an admirable state of confusion as would have carried joy to the heart of the deity Chaos, and the coming of the ladies was patiently awaited over a julip of Captain Seaton's own concoction. At last they too arrive, driven into the perade by a negro servant, who officiated over such an establishment as never was owned by any one save an army surgeon. Contriving to raise consumptive trot, the two animals who drew the article facetiously termed a carriage, brought it up in front of the mess house with grand flourish; and as the door was thrown open, all the gentleman rushed forward to assist the ladies to alight. The doctor litedout his lady, and each one extend his arm that he might do the same to the daughter; but the captain, whom old acquaintanceand advanced age entitled, to the priviledge, not only handed her out but actuly kissed her fair cheek! The lieutenants looked foolish at each other—daggers of the captain—and loving at the lady whose beauty, although I shall not stay to describe it was overpowering. They followed the cortege into the house, did their best at the agreeable, and when they found that only were they pleased, but found that Dan-Cupid had actually shot each one of them directly through the heart!

Several days passed on, and Captain Seaton found that morning drills were dispensed with for rambles on the riverbanks, or excursions to the woods—while evening parades gave place to picnics, or rides over the pleasant scenery in the vicinity. All this was winked at, but one morning Captain Seaton discovered that Mr. Harvey, in lieu of mounting the guard at the proper time, was actually engaged in pointing out the beauties of the lake to a young female companion, from the roof of the house, totally forgetful of all duty save that of a cavalier amout.

'Mr. De Lancy,' said the old captain, 'have the goodness to apprise Mr. Harvey that it is now half past nine, and the guard not yet mounted.' Mr. De Lancy did so—and assumed the duty of cicerone, vice Harvey ordered to duty. As the latter descended, he met his captain in the passage, who looked sharply at him, and accosted him with—'These continued' dalliances will not do, sir—you need not trouble yourself to leave the garrison for a week to come, but confine your promenades to the limits of the parade.

SANDWICH ISLANDS AND THE PRESS.

Every one indued with common sense, is familiar with the course of the public press, viz. an article is set afloat haphazard on some new subject of news, and in a trice it is copied into all the papers, each dressing it up in colors to suit their own interest, or the interest of their friends. This causes much misconception, and often strife. So it is with the publication of the Sandwich affair.

The occupation of these Islands by the British published in that great gun the N. O. Bee, which is called "an outrage" a "capture," and every epithet to excite the ill will of our people against England. There are some people that cannot be at peace, like their father of old they would make War in heaven. Can these be christians? No. But those whose hirlings they are, have the name, and skulk behind the skreen, when the British took Washington, there was not half as much said! Actually these people are too greedy to be honest.

We have already shown that no power on earth has a better right to those Islands than the British, as the first discoverers of the whole group. But we have a mercenary race amongst us, that would rob heaven, if they could get there.

One says these Islands ought to be "free and independent," another—the pious CHRONICLE, gentleman of Philadelphia says,

"It is not considered the policy of our Government to hold possessions in foreign lands, but we should endeavor to prevent other nations, says the Philadelphia Daily Chronicle, from taking possession of the property of a people who have been recognized as independent in commercial relations with us, and whom it is our duty and interest to protect."

"We should endeavor to prevent other nations from taking possession of the property of a people," &c. There is a Solomon for you, they ought to send him upon a mission to make Miller converts, what right had American citizens to settle upon lands out of the jurisdiction of the United States?

How come they by property? By fraud and oppression—working the poor natives nearly to death. In fact they had better be dead doing the work of oxen and horses spreading the gospel forsooth, as they do in the U. S. Were it not improper for us to do so, we could introduce some specimens of their brutality, to young innocent Sandwich girls—such as we see published in this country daily! We trust the English will break up this den of infamy and cruel ty.

What does the gentleman mean by "having the property of a people who have been recognized as independent in commercial relations with US, and whom it is our duty to protect." Where is the school-master now? Mark how he struggles to put some face on it. Recognized by WHOM? Who is US.

Was there ever a treaty formed to guarantee commercial relations between "us" and those Islands? Can commerce be legal unless authorized by the proper authorities? Their law is like their gospel—no truth in either.

That illicit commerce of all sorts have been carried on between those gentlemen and their friends here are true, which is contrary to the laws of nations, and might happen to be construed into piracy: No. a treaty must precede commerce, and must be proclaimed to all the nations, on earth when did "A people" form such a treaty? and who is a people? The Sandwich Islanders we know, and have been informed, certain missionaries who went to convert these Islanders to christianity under which profession they have seized upon the Islands, thrown off the mask, claim the right of SOIL—COMMERCE and all the rights of other nations and have the impudence to ask protection in their unlawful pursuits!

Where is their God, can they not trust in the Lord.? They get millions of dollars "for God" as they say, will God do nothing for them? It would cost millions, to keep a Naval armed force there sufficent to protect them.

If our people cou'd not protect their own Capitol on their own soil how could they protect spots in the Pacific.

Only hear.

"The feeling of which we speak—for all the distant Islands of the Pacific there were none in which this country had so deep an interest as in the independence of those now taken. Our missionaries were the first to carry there the doctrines of our holy religion—our people have long since had commercial dealing with them; our ships of war and commercial marine have for a long time made them a place of rendezvous—"

Our missionaries were the first to carry there the doctrines of our holy religion" This was bad for their own country. They had better return, and bring there Doctrines with them, our country is a land of riots—robberies, pickpockets, murderers, and brutes, in human shape, they should come back, if they did not convert those fiends, in the three great CITIES which sent them forth. If they will not or can not reform these, let them be branded with false-hood, and served as THEY used to serve the Quakers, when they held the power over church and state—what they are now trying to—re-establish. From this extract it would seem they had SHIPS enough there to protect themselves.

Do they wish the U. S. to involve themselves in guilt and debt to support them in PAMPERED UNRESTRAINED IMPUDENCE?

THE PRESIDENTS TOUR

It is gratifying to every true hearted American to observe that respect which is paid by all parties to the chief magistrate of the United States.

It is enough to revive our flagging confidence in the people. May it ever be so!

☞Capting Tyler it seems is likely to have a rival in his race of infamy in the person of President Houston, of Texas. Go it boots! we don't care which wins.—Clarksburg (Va) Whig.

Would it not be more christian like in our friends of the Whig who appear to be long to the pious class, to send some pious missionary to convert those two Presidents rather than leave them to perish in their sins.

"The credit of Ohio is looking up since democrats have had the management of it. A loan proposed by her commissioners had been taken at par. Under her late whig rulers her bonds were at a discount of nearly or quite fifty per cent."—Fincastle. (Va:) Demo.

Pray friend C. how did it happen? The Democracy had the management of our public affairs TWELVE years, the Whigs ONE month, (under Harrison) how did it happen that the Democrats suffered the credit of Ohio to sink? If they can raise the credit why did they suffer it to fall?

NORTH CAROLINA.

"HARD MONEY TIMES.—At a sale in Pearson county, North Carolina, under a deed of trust, sheep went off at 5 cents a head, hogs at 10 cents—and a likely negro boy for $100. So much for the unholy war against the currency by the experimenters."—Exchange paper.

The Democrats ought to visit this place of all means.

IRELAND.

Repeal in New York.—The tribune of Wednesday says; "The Repeal demonstration so vigorously and yet so spontaneously going forward in this city during the present week; is one of the remarkable occurrences of the year. Upwards of one thousand before Saturday. If the Repealers in Ireland be men of the same enthusiasm as those here, the Minister who drive such a people to desperation incurs a fearful, a terrific responsibility. We trust that no such dreadful crisis will arise."

For ourself, we should rather see a more slow and sure movement. true valor never blusters—such was Mr. O'Connel once, but he seems to have lost all patience.

He ought to reflect that his friends have their hand in the Lions mouth and concillation and persuasion would have a happier effect.

We know so little of the subject, however we can form no opinion except that the repeal ought to be granted. Large sums of money are almost daily sent over to Ireland to promote this object. But how the money is to be applied we have never learned. We think much trouble must be encounted either way. Let Mr. O'Connel say what he will, if it comes to blows, the Irish will be worsted, from want of discipline, and the ungovernable pasions of the common people, we have great fears for the issue.

We have the following beautiful remark from the Baltimore Sun.

"England may fill our towns and villages with soldiery—with them the Irish people will have no contest, no strife, save in acts of good will and hospitality. She may blockade our our ports with her fleets, and crowd our rivers with armed steamers, yet there will be peace—universal peace must reign throughout the land. there will be no civil war—Peel will seek it in vain. there shall be no strife, no bloodshed, no commotion—yet Ireland shall be for the Irish and the Irish shall have Ireland." DUBLIN.

FROM THE PITTSBURG MANUFACTURER.

"Anne Royall is very much excited about the Sandwich Islands. She sides with the British,—Who would have thought it of Anny?"

We are of so little consequence that our weight would not amount to that of a feather in the scale of human affairs, but we never took a bribe nor betrayed. Our friend Mr P. will excuse us, we oppose oppression an expose fraud, we are no less surprised at Mr P. for being on the blue skins side a set of greedy cormorants monopolizing every thing, and what have the people in return, crime in its worst features?

"As the snake, roll'd in a flowering bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child,
That, for the beauty, thinks it excellent."

"A CURIOSITY.—The Cincinnati Gazette says: "A Mexican saddle of splendid workmanship can be seen at the store of our neighbor; Isaac Young. It was made in the city of Mexico, and is richly mounted with solid silver and ornamented in all respects the georgeous style peculiar to that people. It belongs to Mr. Kendal, the sufferings and adventures on the Texan Santa Fe expedition are so well known. It cost $600, and was presented to him before he left Mexico, by his fellow sufferers, for his exertions in procuring their liberation. At the request of Mr. Young, he has sent it to this city, to be exhibited at the approaching Mechanics Fair."—Globe.

This is highly honorable to Mr. Kendall, and no less so to the Globe for copying it.

THE BELIGERENTS.

What with the Presidents tour—Mr. Websters speech, the Madisonian has hardly time to say his prayers. While the Globe, cool and accomplished like a master player or rather a master in chancery, is deliberately fixing the BALLS in the rackets for the great game which is to decide the fate of this country.

Meantime! (Ah Jonney we dread for you) it is whispered that all these Tyler men the new appointments that are daily and hourly taking place, are only shaming it, that they are still VAN BUREN men which are Benton MEN in fact, so Jonny you can take this warning as you like. We advise none—we merely give warning.

MR. J. F. MOORE OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

We are much pleased to hear that Mr. Moore of the War Department is likely to settle permanently amongst us, as a preacher of the gospel, and that a church is to be erected for his use in this city.

Mr. M. is one of the most amiable and at the same time the most accomplished gentlemen in the government. success to him.

PROPOSALS

For publishing in the City of Raleigh, North Carolina, a weekly Newspaper, to be entitled

THOS. LORING, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

I propose to publish a paper under the above title, believing the public mind requires a Newspaper partizan, and devoted to Literature, News, Agriculture, Miscellany, General Politics, &c. independent of party bias. I am encouraged to this undertaking by many of my late associates, as well as by many who have been opposed to me. A large portion of the community have become tired of the matter and the manner of party strife, and require a Newspaper of which they can rely solely for impartial and unprejudiced statements of facts, and for matter of general interest with the expectation that moderation and calmness of temper shall be the distinguishing features that mark the composition of the Editor and the Communications of his correspondents.

The public will have an opportunity of testing its claims to patronage, by a very cheap process. I feel confident of giving satisfaction to all its subscribers.

I shall publish public documents connected with the history of the State and of the Union, so far as the limits of the Independent will permit—espicially the messages of the Presidents of the United States, the Messages of the Governors of North Carolinia, with abstracts from other public documents, and Legislative and Congressional Proceedings. In giving a record of the movements of political parties, I shall endeavor to state the facts, without partiality or comment. Of public men, of all parties, it is my design to speak with respect; and when justice and the public good requires that Demagogues attached to either, should be reproved it shall be done with candor and good temper.

The independent will be printed on a sheet a little smaller than the North Carolinia Standard, once a week, at the low price of $2 per annum, payable in advance.

If any person who pays $2 in advance, becomes dissatisfied at the end of 6 months one dollar shall be returned to him, provided it can be done without taxing the Editor with postage. Or, any one is at liberty to subscribe for six months only and pay one dollar.

We the undersigned intend to publish a paper called the READER'S FRIEND, in doing this we ask not the patronage of the youth of Wisconsin and vicinity, much wor the consideration of MONEY but for the on benefit to beguile away the leisure moments, which otherwise might hang heavily upon them. We also know that many will be prejudiced against us, owing to the failure of others, who, have like us made an effort to get up a paper for the youth, but their failure was owing to their not possessing those great ingredients of, "PATIENCE and PERSEVERANCE" We therefore hope you will throw all prejudice aside. once more and give us your support and, if after this there fails to be the paper established which will do honor to every youth we will forever give in that they better never more try to do any thing in the way of getting up a paper here.

The Reader's Friend will be published every week, to commence the 7th day of June next. and will be devoted to temperance Day Selected and Original tales, Poetry Agriculture, &c. &c. It will be Neutral Politics and Religion, the terms are owe dollar a year half in advance and taking things into consideration it will be all terms and well filled sheet. We therefore ask all the year of this and other towns to give us their honest support, and we think none will ever regret taking it. ☞Any person sending us 4 good subscribers will be entitled to the fifth copy gratis.

Aunt Peggy resided
In a snug little cot
By the side of Goose River
Content with her lot;
She 'd ducks and she 'd chickens,
A cat and a dog,
A nice brindle heifer,
And a monstrous fat hog.

Though forty and ugly,
She wasn't afraid
Of ev'n becoming
A deserted old maid;
For she,d GOLDEN attractions
In sooth not a few,
And a host of admirers
But no one "would do,"

Old Time at length scattered
On her caput grey hairs,
And her face became wrinkled
With years, not with cares.
As she looked in her mirror
And found age creeping,
The thought of her lovers.
But ah! they were allgone!

'Twas night and sad hearted
To her lonebed she crept
Where she sighed and she sorrowed,
But ne'er a wink slept.
There she vowed in her bosom,
The first offer she 'd take,
And vowed that this promise
She never would break.

There appeared of a sudden,
As she 's woke from a doze,
A dark colored suitor
In a suit of black clothes,
She started affrighted,
And sat up in bed;
Then fainted and straighened
As stiff as if dead.

"I 'm here ,'said the stranger,
'To pay my respects;
'Tis your person I sue for,
Not your gold nor effects.,
There was no resisting
The offer—though evil—
And so my Aunt Peggy
Eloped with the Devil!

THE SLEEPING CHILD.

By miss pardoe

Wearied with pleasure! Oh, flow deep,
Such slumber seems to be—
Thou fairy tereasure! I could weep
As thus I gaze on thee.
Ay, weep, and with most' bitter tears,
Wrung from the spirits core,
To thing that in a few short years,
Thou'll sleep that sleep no more.

Wearied with pleasure! what a sound
To greet a world-worn ear!
Can we, who tread life,s giddy round,
Sleep like the cherub here!
as! for us, joy't brightest hours
All fevor as they fly,
And have a blight—as sun struck flowers
Of too much glory die.

Wearied with pleasure! Does the wing
Of angels fan thy brow?
sweet child do birds about the sing,
and blossums 'round thee blow?
Is thy calm sleep with gladness rife?
Do stars above thee shine?
Oh! would give whole years of life,
To dream such dreams as thine.

The way the Yankees get over the Virginia Inspection Law.—Capt Marryatt says the first thing the Americans do after the passage is a law is, to devise some scheme to defeat for execution and render it of no effect:—such indeed seems to be case in regard to the Virgin ia inspection law to protect the slave property of her own citizen, against the legislation of N. York.—Va, has passed a very efficient law; but Yankee ingenity has discovered away to envade it. A friend assures us that N.Y ves sels now clear from Jersy City, were they procure their regular papers, which cost them one dollar, and for Va. discharge their cargoes and returning c ear for Jersy City—thus including the Inspection law—Norfolk Herald. POLITICAL DECEPTION.

A 'Democratic' orator 'out West,' according to the Cincinnati Gazette, gives the following reply to a question asked by a friend, how he could speak so often and so long to any purpose?

'Why, when I am at a loss for ideas, or arguments, or don't know what to say to the people, I get upon my liberty key. I strike that always with effect, Rome, Greece, Poland, our Revolutionaries, my boy, help out amazingly. If that fails, I set up a regular built howl against the English,all hate them, you know, and I walk into the Whigs, British bought and bank I ought; if this don't answer, I get at their prejudices the Rich a gainst the Poor, that's my theme, and the way I talk about palaces, and nabobs, and all that of thing, is nation but I can tell you I am sure to see the greasy countenance of the "peeps' lighten upon some one of these points, and then, my boy, I know where I am."

The man who can turn female innocence from its fair state of purity, should never know the fond tenderness of a mother, the unfeigned affection of a sister, the devotion of a wife, or the holy balm of a kind daughter's kiss. The seducer should have no relative, and none should be his friend but the base. He should be made to turn with shame before the eyes of women and fromm before the cold score and contempt of man Scout from society the man who.—

REVOLUTIONARY HERO.A FACT

The Fourth of July 1838, was celebrated in the usual manner, with civil and military rejoicings, in one of the most considerable towns in eastern Pennsylvania. In the evening of the day a public festival was held within a beautiful grove at the suburbs of the town. The committee of arrangements by request of the orator, appointed for the occasion, Mr.—collected all the revolutionary veterans they could find within the compass of several miles and arranged them with the effect on either side of the chair of the President. Every thing went off charmingly—the dinner was excellent, the wine was delicious, the music was soul cheering, and the toasts patriotic. After the Declaration of Independence was read, Mr. B.— rose and addressed the meeting in a strain of eloquence which called forth heartfelt and rapturous bursts of applause, He dwelt pathetically on the hardships and privations of that little band of heroes who fought by the side of our beloved Washington, through that memorable struggle which ended in the glorious achievement of our liberties. in the midst of his discourse, he turned round to the vertains whose moistened eyes showed how the chord that awoke in their recollections was touched, and suddenly questioned a silver headed septuagenarian.

'What battle have you fought in my old friend, won't you tell us?

'i crossed the Brandywine with Washington at Yorktown and saw the surrender of Lord Cornwalis:'

"And you!, continued the orator.

'I was at saratoga: and I tell you it done our hearts good to see read coats march by us with furled banners and revesed arms—fine looking fellows they were too:"

'And you?'

'I was with General Green throughout his southern campaigns; and I fought with him in every battle:'

'And you: where were four laurels won? an

'On the sea.' answered the old weather beaten tar. I was with Barry when he taught the proud Brittons that we were as invincible on the ocean as on the land.'

The cheering was tremendous;

The orator went on ,And you; tell us where your honored garlands were earned? speak, old father, upon what field of blood did you behold victory per ched upon the flag.'

'Under Washington. gallant soldier unde Washington?'

'Oh. yaw; I vash under Vashington, also ve soorended—

'Surrender! what do you mean my old hero surrendered!

'Vy ya mheer! to be sure ve soorender ed Shenderal Vashington, I vas one of the Hessians!'

Imagine—reader, the surprise of the audience, the momentary suspense, and deafening roar of laughter, and plaud its that followed:

Domestic Felicity — Cincinnati paper describes a rare traveling party that passed through that city not long since. It beats the steam horses all out. The account says that the quad consisted of a hardy adventurer with a wife and five children ; assing through the streets with all his household secured upon a wheel bar row grotesque and inimitable workmanship. He informed some bystanders that she had come from the State of New York' had passed through a portion of the States of Pensylvania and Virginia, and was still to go over the a portion of Ohio and Indiana before reaching ll inois the point of destination. The youngest child was accommodated with a seat upon the the barrow, while the mother and her remainig children followed the husband and father, trudling his precious burthen to his new home. —Rich. Star.

This anedote is but one of a thousand that might be cited of as many different men from small beginings rose to great stations and influnce; and shows the importance of not despeing the day of small things, in any condition so circumstances of life. All nature, in fact is ful of instructive lessons on this point which it would be well for us more thoroughly to study and appreciate.

the river, rolling onward its accumulated were to the ocaan, was in its small beginina but oozing rill trickling down some moss covered rock, and windling like a silver thready tween the green benks to which it imparbe verdare: the tree that sweeps the air withted hundred branches, and mocks at tee tem its wa ii its small beginnings, but a litt/e peal troden under foot an unnoticed; then a sue shoot that the leaping hare might fort,-rushed.

It is related in the Genaleman' M gnoine, of Chanty the celebrated Scultor, that when a boy he was observed by a gentleman in the neighborhood of Sheffield, very attentively engaged in cutting a stick with a penknife. He asked the lad what he was doing; when with great courtesy he replied. "I am cutting old Fox,s herd," Fox was the schoolmaster of the village. On this the gentleman asked to see what he had done, and pronouncing it to be an excelent likeness presented him with sixpence and this may be reckoned the first money Chantry ever received for the production of his arts

MISSOURI CURRENT RIVER COPPER MINES.

SHANNON COUNTY, MISSOURI.

WOULD now ask the attention of capitalist to these Copper Mines, rice in are. yielding from 40 to 66 per cent, of copper, which by at single process of smelting, is equal to the South American refined pig—so pronounced by Messrs McKim & Co., of Baltimore, to whom several shipments were made by the "Mine a la Motte Mining Company." Situated near the junction of Jack's Fork and the Current river, within half a mile of either stream and near waterpower for all manufacturing purposes, and under a sunny clime in the vicinity of agricultural lands equal to the best in Missouri: surrounded by hills bearing inexaustible forests, and rising to mountains whence flow pure and never failing springs forming navigation six months in the year,—Nature with a profuse ends seems to have omitted but few facilities for manufacturing and transporting the product of the copper mines. Believing this property of all the vast and fertile Mississippi valley may be made the most safe and profitable investment of capital, will propose a disposition of a portian (by sale or otherwise,) on liberal terms. by which to enlist the agency of capitalists, and make it productive.

Miners may obtain mining lots, by application to S. Chilson at the mines.

P. S. The above described mines, since the year 1837, have been held, in a measure, unproductive by conflicting claims. A first located confirmed Spanish grants on them, which James Whitcomb, then Commissioner, decided were not confirmed. I then acquired title under Mr. James Thom son who holdsdien by floating pre-emption right on extensive by Josias Berryman and took said company, both of whom have villains are convicted by the facts of bribery and perjury on which alone was set at naught by Whitcomb who was successful in the change of Commissioners an investigation was had and my title confirmed. See report of Conel T. J. Allen register of the land office and the decision of the General land Office as published in the Globe November 7th 1842 also decision of the Hon. NEW GUIDE TO WASHINGTON.

By G. Watterston, Esq—The above work just published, with a frontispiece of the Statue of Washington by Greenough, and contains every thing relating to the history of Washington, and its progress and improvement since its origin to be citizen and stranger, and is a perfect guide to all its object of curiosity, and to every thing that a stranger would be desirous to make himself acquainted with, while a sojourner in it, or a resident abroad. Gives a true picture of Washington, though not a mere picture book—half its institutions, works of art, &c., are briefly but satisfactorily described. It sketches its usages customs, manners, and religious and moral tone of its society—public buildings, literary, social, and other institutions—its location, the condition of the legal and medical professions, its growth and character of its resident population—gives an abstract of its municipal regulations, civil and criminal courts—duties of the principal executive officers of the General Government, of the committees of Congress, and a great variety of useful, local, and general information which a resident as well as a stranger would be pleased to possess. Among the descriptions of the societies which have been organized in Washington, are two at considerable length, and of great interest—one, of the National Institution, and the other of the Society of Odd Fellows.

The work is printed in a neat and handsome style, of over 200 pages, and for sale at the book-store of R. FARNHAM, corner of 9th street and Pennsylvania avenue.

SHERWOOD FOR CHRONIC DISEASES

Of the class of Hypertrophy, including the forms of Scrofula, viz: Tubercula Consumption, Dyspepsia, Chronic Disease of the Liver, of the Heart of the Spleen, of the Kidneys, of the Spine, White Swellings, Scrofulous Sore Eyes, Scald Head, King's Evil, Leucorrhœa, Chlorosis, Menorrhagia or Females complaints.

These are but different modifications of the same disease, arising from the same cause, distinguished by the same diagnosis, and curable by the same remedies. Their common cause is an irregular action of the Electro-Galvanic forces in the system—they may all be detected by pressure upon the sides of the sternum and glands of the neck which elicits the Electro-magnetic remedies: The latter are accompanied by a compendious medical treatise, explaining the principles of the discovery upon which they are founded, stating the manner in which they are to be applied. In this work Dr. Sherwood demonstrates the fact that every part of the human body, together with every particle of animate and inanimate matter either in a negative or positive state of electro and that every motion, in all matter, whether in the largest masses or in the smallest particles, is produced by the attracting and repelling force of this universal principle. The morbid action which produces disease of the organs or tissues seems to be occasioned by the undue preponderance of one of these forces in the system and his remedies restore health by subduing this irregular action to an equilibrium. By this means the very seeds of the disease are eradicated, and a permanent cure effected, even cases where all hope of relief from other sources is abandoned. The Electro-Magnetic remedies are the only preparations applicable to this Prevailing class of diseases and they never disappoint the confidence reposed in them, these symptoms of the class of diseases to which they are applicable can be discovered, under the directions contained in the work which accompanies it, without the aid of a physician, and can be used with perfect safety and success without dieting or inconvenience.
